

The “Creator’s Garden”

The Garden River First Nation Reserve was created in 1850 with the signing of the Robinson Huron Treaty. The name stems from the days of the fur trade in which the people of this area were well known for growing vegetables along the routes the voyagers and explorers followed.

Nestled in the heart of the small northern Ontario community, scrolled along the railway track clearly identifies “This Is Indian Land”

The SHKE-SAHKEHJEWAOOSA Community Center celebrated its grand opening in 1991. It is known as the “Big Log House”, and was constructed using sustainably harvested timbers acquired directly from the surrounding area.

The Center is an ideal venue for hosting fundraisers, weddings, parties, educational workshops, conferences, political meetings, family gatherings, and social gatherings. Food preparation equipment and catering services are also available.
